Claims 13-16

The subject matter of Claims 13-16 has not been searched.
Consequently, nor has an examination been carried out
(PCT Rule 66.1(e)).

Supplemental Box

(To be used when the space in any of the preceding boxes is not sufficient)

Continuation of: Box IV.3.

The international search report relates to the subject matter of Claims 1-12 and 17. The International Preliminary Examining Authority is of the view, however, that the subject matter of the application lacks unity of invention (PCT Article 34(3), PCT Rules 13 and 68).

The application consists of two groups of inventions:

The first invention concerns Claims 1-17 (all in part). The invention relates to the DNA sequence of SEQ ID NO:1, the protein sequence of SEQ ID NO:2, the use of this DNA sequence, a process and a test system for finding and identifying substances which inhibit the activity of the protein, inhibitors of the protein, a process for preventing undesirable plant growth by inhibiting the activity of the protein of SEQ ID NO:2 and to a plant with additional expression of the DNA sequence of SEQ ID NO:1.

The second invention concerns Claims 1-17 (all in part). The invention relates to the DNA sequence of SEQ ID NO:3, the protein sequence of SEQ ID NO:4, the use of this DNA sequence, a process and a test system for finding and identifying substances which inhibit the activity of the protein, inhibitors of the protein, a process for preventing undesirable plant growth by inhibiting the activity of the protein of SEQ ID NO:4 and to a plant with additional expression of the DNA sequence of SEQ ID NO:3.

The inventions are not so linked that they form a single general inventive concept (PCT Rule 13.1). This general concept is that of DNA sequences which code for PRPP amidotransferase proteins.

This general concept is not inventive since it is clear from document D3 that PRPP amidotransferase proteins have already been isolated in animals, plants and microorganisms.

The requisite unity of invention is not established (PCT Rule 13.1) since there is no technical relationship in accordance with PCT Rule 13.2 between the subjects of the groups of dependent claims involving one or more of the same or corresponding technical features.

The Examining Authority is of the view that the present claims can be examined in their entirety at a reasonable cost. Consequently, the applicant is not requested to pay additional fees or to restrict the subject matter of the application. The applicant should note, however, that an objection can be raised during the regional phase owing to a lack of unity of invention.

V. Reasoned statement under Article 35(2) with regard to novelty, inventive step or industrial applicability:

	Claims		NO
Inventive step (IS)	Claims		YES
	Claims	1-12, 17	NO
Industrial applicability (IA)	Claims	1-12, 17	YES

2. Citations and explanations

Reference is made to the following documents:

D1: WO-A-98/33925 (YALE UNIVERSITY) 6 August 1998 (1998-08-06)

D2: US-A-5 780 253 (SUBRAMANIAN VENKITESWARAN ET AL.) 14 July 1998 (1998-07-14)

D3: ITO T. ET AL.: "Two amidophosphoribosyltransferase genes of Arabidopsis thaliana expressed in different organs" PLANT MOLECULAR BIOLOGY, Vol. 26, 1994, pages 529-533, XP000990353, indicated in the application.

1. Novelty

The present application meets the requirements of PCT Article 33(2) since the subject matter of Claims 1-12 and 17 is novel.

2. Inventive step

The present application does not meet the requirements of PCT Article 33(3) since the subject matter of Claims 1-12 and 17 does not involve an inventive step.

2.1. Claims 1-5 and 17

Document D3 is considered to be the closest prior art to the subject matter of Claims 1-2. That document discloses two amidophosphoribosyltransferase proteins-DNA sequences of Arabidopsis thaliana.

The subject matter of the present application differs from the closest prior art by the cloning of an amidophosphoribosyltransferase of Nicotiana tabacum. The problem to be solved by the present application can therefore be seen as that of cloning amidophosphoribosyltransferases of a different plant specie.

The solution consists in the cloning of amidophosphoribosyltransferase of Nicotiana tabacum (SEQ ID NO:1 and 2).

The solution suggested in Claims 1-2 of the present application cannot be considered to be inventive (PCT Article 33(3)) for the following reasons:

It is clear from document D3 that PRPP amidotransferase proteins have already been isolated in animals, microorganisms and plants. Consequently, it is to be expected that Nicotiana tabacum also contains a protein of this type. Furthermore, D3 also shows that these PRPP amidotransferase proteins, from different origins, contain preserved areas (D3: Figure 3). It is clear from document D2 that the enzymes involved in the change of the nucleotide substance are suitable as targets for herbicides. This information would induce a person skilled in the art to use the DNA-protein sequence of Arabidopsis thaliana and by means of routine methods decode the DNA-protein sequence of Nicotiana tabacum. The subject matter of Claims 3-5 and 17 therefore also does not involve an inventive step.

2.2. Claim 10

The subject matter of Claim 10 does not involve an inventive step (PCT Article 33(3)) for the following reasons:

D2 discloses a process for identifying substances which inhibit the activity of specific enzymes in plants (abstract, Claim 8 (a)). The process of D2 and the process of the present application consist of the same process steps. A person skilled in the art is therefore able to use this process in order to find substances which inhibit the PRPP amidotransferase.

2.3. Claims 7-9, 11 and 12

The subject matter of Claims 7-9, 11 and 12 does not involve an inventive step (PCT Article 33(3)) for the following reasons:

D1 discloses a process for identifying inhibitors of AdT activity (Example 5, page 46). The process of the present application is a result of the process of D1 and the use of routine methods.

3. Industrial applicability

The subject matter of Claims 1-12 and 17 is industrially applicable (PCT Article 33(4)).

4. Claim 9

Claim 9 is not dependent on itself, but rather on Claim 8.
